

THE REMAINS OF COMPANY D

JAMES CARL NELSON

READ BY RAY PORTER

A Booklist Editors' Choice for History, 2009

Haunted by an ancestor's tale of near death on a distant World War I battlefield, James Carl Nelson set out in pursuit of the scraps of memory of his grandfather's small infantry unit. Years of travel across the world led to the retrieval of unpublished personal papers, obscure memoirs, and communications from numerous doughboys, as well as original interviews with the descendants of his grandfather's comrades in arms. The result is a compelling tale of battle rooted in new primary sources and one man's search for his grandfather's legacy in a horrifying maelstrom that is today poorly understood and nearly forgotten. Nelson's account follows the members of Company D, 28th Infantry Regiment, United States First Division, from enlistment to combat to the effort to recover their remains, focusing on three major battles at Cantigny, Soissons, and Meuse-Argonne.

JAMES CARL NELSON is a journalist who has worked as a staff writer for the Miami Herald. He is a member of the Western Front Association, which is devoted to the study of the Great War. He lives in Eden Prairie, Minnesota.
