

CALEB CARR SURRENDER, NEW YORK

Read by Tom Taylorson

In rural, impoverished Burgoyne County, New York, a pattern of strange deaths begins to emerge: adolescent boys and girls are found murdered, their corpses left hanging in gruesome, ritualistic fashion. Senior law enforcement officials are quick to blame a serial killer, but their efforts to apprehend this criminal are peculiarly ineffective.

Meanwhile, in the county's small town of Surrender, Trajan Jones and Michael Li teach online courses in profiling and forensic science from Jones' family farm. Alone and armed mainly with their wits, the outcast pair are secretly called in to consult on the case.

Racing against the case's mounting stakes, Jones and Li find that they are battling not only to unravel the mystery of how the children died but also to defend themselves from the threats of shadowy agents who want to stop them from uncovering the truth. It is a truth that, Jones believes, leads to the increasingly wealthy city of New York. But will they be able to trace the case before they fall victim to the murderous forces that stalk them?

CALEB CARR is a novelist, military historian, and screenwriter. He is the son of beat generation figure Lucien Carr, and he received a degree in military and diplomatic history from New York University. He currently resides on a farm estate in upstate New York.
