

Everyone in her family has a special strength. Everyone, that is, except for Isabel, who feels a little left behind by her siblings.

The new girl at school, Monica, is absolutely marvelous and everyone wants to be her friend. There's just one person she's not good at being nice to—Isabel.

Isabel has never felt more invisible. She has so many fears, they feel like worry-moths that flutter in her belly. With every passing day, it seems like they get stronger and stronger. How can Invisible Isabel make people listen?
