

Dear Noah, I miss you so, so much.

Living on a farm Millie has a lot going on. Life as a pre-teen brings big, mixed feelings, but with friends, family and the school chaplain, she just might make it through.

Millie's baby brother, Noah, was stillborn 4 years ago. She writes to him in heaven, confiding her anxieties when her parents announce they are going to have another baby. Millie is both excited and scared.

What if this baby dies like Noah did? What if something happens to her mum?

Millie learns to take life day-by-day and that even in storms, there are sometimes rainbows.

FRANCES PRENTICE began dreaming of being an author when she was eight years old and discovered she could write poetry and stories. At this time, she had decided she would become an author "one day", but always knew that she wanted to "do life" first. Frances currently homeschools her two youngest children, is involved in a homeschool co-op, tutors students in literacy, and runs a creative writing group. She is also developing her own phonics and handwriting programs. You can contact her via her website: www.ExploringLiteracy.com.au or her email: frances@theprentices.net.
