

The walls between worlds are wearing thin. On one side is the bustling neighborhood of San Antonio—home to thirteen-year-old Tito Rodríguez. On the other is a mythical realm where forces of darkness are looking for a way out. Standing between worlds are the guardians of humankind—a race of fierce warrior cats, who appear in our world as cute and furry companions.

When Tito follows a stray cat through a hidden portal, he finds himself at the center of this cosmic battle between the warrior cats and evil spirits that feed on negative emotions. And according to an ancient prophecy, Tito is the Chosen One who will lead the fight against the forces of darkness . . . probably.

It turns out that there are three possible Chosen Ones—Tito and his new friends and fellow outsiders Luisito and Isa, who have their own furry sidekicks (or wise mentors, if you ask the cats). And with the darkness slipping through the cracks to the human world, all three will have to train for the ultimate fight and prove who is the true hero.

NIK KORPON is the author of Radicals, The Rebellion's Last Traitor, and more. He met Jorge as a Spanish tutor, then they became friends, then cowriters. He lives north of Baltimore. This is his first middle-grade novel.

JORGE ENRIQUE PAZ was born in the vibrant city of Cali, Colombia, where the rhythm of salsa and the purring of cats continue to inspire him every day. A lover of anime, music, and animals (especially cats), he wrote The Cat Prophecies, his first children's book, as a tribute to everything that brings him joy.
