

Reimagine Home Education with these Ten Historical Heroes

Institutional schools are falling short, not only in fostering creativity and virtue in children but in nearly every key area. But this broken system isn't our only option. What could education look like if we cast aside fear and uncertainty to boldly reimagine a life of joy and freedom with our children?

From bestselling author and trusted homeschool advocate Jennifer Pepito, The Inspired Homeschool explores the joys and benefits of home education through the lives of ten home-educated figures from history, including C.S. Lewis, Laura Ingalls Wilder, Blaise Pascal, and more. Combining contemporary research, biblical insights, and practical homeschooling tips, Jennifer expands your imagination for what education can look like beyond traditional public school so you can experience more freedom, joy, and peace as a family.

Both a primer for imagination and a guide for practical action, this engaging resource helps you not only to provide your kids a better education, but to empower them to create a better world. Reclaim your children's education and equip them to live with character, faith, and purpose!

Explore home education through the stories of:

Laura Ingalls Wilder • Benjamin Franklin • Elizabeth Goudge

C.S. Lewis • Leonardo da Vinci • Charles Dickens

Blaise Pascal • Berthe Morisot • Booker T. Washington • Joan of Arc

Jennifer Pepito is the host of the Restoration Home podcast, author of Habits for a Sacred Home, and the founder of The Peaceful Press (ThePeacefulPress.com). Jennifer is on a mission to help moms overcome fear and live with wonder and purpose, and her homeschool curriculum empowers this through heroic stories, heartwarming poetry, and engaging life skills development. Jennifer's writing has been featured in several online and print journals, including Wild and Free, Commonplace Quarterly, and Home Educating Family.
