

1942, GERMAN-OCCUPIED FRANCE: The Gestapo is urgently chasing the person they have declared to be the “most dangerous spy” working for the Allies. But she keeps evading them . . .

This is the never-before-told story of Virginia Hall, an American spy who changed the course of World War II. Based on original and extensive research, award-winning author Sonia Purnell has uncovered the full secret life of this remarkable wartime hero.

Born into a wealthy family in Baltimore, Maryland, from an early age Virginia knew she would never take the path that was expected of her. Instead, relying mostly on her wits and instincts, she would become the first Allied woman secret agent deployed behind enemy lines in France. And she did so despite having a prosthetic leg, which almost no one knew about. Virginia devoted herself to aiding the French Resistance during World War II, and she revolutionized what it meant to be a spy.

This young readers adaptation of the New York Times bestselling biography is a thrilling and inspiring true story of heroism, spycraft, and fierce persistence.

SONIA PURNELL is a journalist and bestselling author whose first book, Just Boris, was longlisted for the Orwell Prize. Her book Clementine: The Life of Mrs. Winston Churchill was chosen as a book of the year by The Telegraph (UK) and The Independent (London).
