

Drawn from more than fifty years of first-person encounters with the most powerful people in America: the new book in the #1 bestselling series

In his more than five decades as a journalist, Bill O'Reilly has reported from almost ninety countries; covered wars, elections, riots, serial killers, and almost every human-interest story imaginable; and enjoyed in-depth conversations with many of the most powerful and influential leaders in America and around the world.

Confronting America: What Has to Change is a deeply personal account of America's recent history, informed by O'Reilly's firsthand encounters and opinions about those people and their actions. O'Reilly reveals never-before-reported information about five presidential administrations, terrorism, crime, corruption, and famous people, including powerful media figures he has worked with and competed against.

Written in his legendary "No Spin" style, O'Reilly's breakdown of the United States and its vexing problems is unique, provocative, and compelling. From Donald Trump, Barack Obama, the Clintons, and the Bushes, to Paul McCartney, Clint Eastwood, Jack Nicholson, Peter Jennings, Dan Rather, Mike Wallace, Barbara Walters, and scores of other iconic people, O'Reilly offers eyewitness history at its best.

Confronting America promises to make news—and to delight the more than 20 million readers of Bill O'Reilly's books.
