Donald M.G. Sutherland
University of Maryland
RESOLUTE DETERMINATION:
NAPOLEON AND THE FRENCH EMPIRE

In these lectures, Professor Donald M.G. Sutherland explores the life and times of Napoleon, one of history's most brilliant strategic thinkers. But despite his inarguable brilliance, Napoleon has also been denounced as unscrupulously ambitious and as alone responsible for the wars that bear his name. With his scholarly eye, Professor Sutherland imparts a fuller understanding of this polarizing figure and deftly shows how Napoleon fit into the sweep of history—and how he helped to define it.

DONALD M.G. SUTHERLAND is a professor of history at the University of Maryland in College Park, Maryland. His first book, The Chonans: A Social History of Popular Counterrevolution in Upper Brittany, 1780–1795 (1982), received honorable mention from the Canadian Historical Association. Professor Sutherland is the author of France 1789–1815: Revolution and Counterrevolution (1985) and The French Revolution and Empire: The Quest for a Civic Order (2003). He also shared the Koren Prize awarded by the Society for French Historical Studies for the best article in a given year. He has received a number of other awards and fellowships, including a Guggenheim Fellowship for 2001–2002.
