Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt: The Home Front in World War II

Narrated by Nelson Runger

"Goodwin has pulled off the double trick of making Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt seem so monumental as to have come from a very distant past, and at the same time so vital as to have been alive only yesterday."

—New York Times

Author Doris Kearns Goodwin won the Pulitzer prize for this New York Times best-seller. No Ordinary Time is both a compelling look into the Roosevelt Presidency and the sweeping chronicle of a nation undergoing a time of great change.

With intriguing personal detail, Goodwin expertly renders an intimate portrait of Roosevelt as a confident, idealistic, passionate, and visionary leader. After the swift and decisive Nazi invasions of 1940, Roosevelt realizes that miracles of innovation and production are necessary to prepare a deeply depressed America for the realities of modern war. Eleven years after the triumph of his New Deal social programs, a crippled, yet resilient Franklin and steadfast Eleanor must face the ultimate test of will and determination and lead a country through war.

Revealing individual human vitality at work on a monumental scale, No Ordinary Time is the story of a legendary president and first lady and the indelible mark they left on the pages of American history. This audiobook features a thoughtful narration by Audie® Award winner Nelson Runger.
